this version of vreveal also has some bug fixes. according to the company, it should be easier to use, with some improvements in the interface. also, vreveal now supports, for example, vimeo and facebook videos. finally, the company has added a new, free, demo version, in case anyone is interested in trying it out. one of the things i enjoyed about vreveal was that it also supported some of the more popular video formats. i'm not a fan of dvds, so i can't really comment on those, but i did enjoy the ability to add my videos to my ipod or iphone with a simple drag and drop, and it is very easy to make a playlist of your favorite videos. though if you're not using vreveal you'll have to use some other program to view these videos, and that means conversion. this takes a bit of time, and you can end up with your video looking weird in some places. the video quality settings are very easy to use, and if you have a faster machine you can use the gpu to help speed up your editing. if you're using an older computer, there are settings that will help you make it work faster, but i was able to get a 2 minute movie edited in around 10 minutes. again, i'm not sure if you'd be able to do this with an editing program, but it is possible with vreveal. i couldn't find any settings that would make my machine automatically adjust the settings, but if you're having problems with them you can go into the settings and manually select your settings from there. when you first run vreveal, you'll be asked if you'd like to automatically update the software. if you have an ati card, there's also an option to turn on cuda, which will make your computer run faster when editing. if you're using nvidia, there's also an option to turn on cuda, which will make your computer run faster when editing. both of these are great options for people with ati and nvidia cards. if you're using an older machine, motiondsp will tell you what settings you're using, and will suggest if you have an ati or nvidia card. either way you'll be able to improve the quality of your video without sacrificing your cpu, or gpu, and i'll give you some tips on how to do that in the next section.

the way vreveal works is that it imports your video, then you select and preview the enhancements you want to make. i believe there are a ton of different video enhancements, but i was only able to try a few, so i can't be sure of the quality of all of them. the enhancements are easy to use, and they're also very customizable. you can choose a color filter for your footage, you can enhance colors, you can remove noise, and you can even remove some of your footage if you want. you can also preview your footage to see what you're doing. if you have questions about the process or the results, there's a good chance that motiondsp has a support forum that can help you. (you'll want to consider buying one of the commercial products described above, or using a different solution.) if you have a technical question, the company's official forums are a good place to start. there are also some information posts and discussion threads on various tech web sites. if you own a copy of vreveal premium 3.2, you can upgrade to vreveal 3.2 premium for $29.95. vreveal 3.2 premium supports 64-bit windows, both 32-bit and 64-bit mac os x, linux, android, and ios devices. if you already own a copy of vreveal 3.2, the upgrade key will be emailed to you. if you own vreveal 3.2 premium and don't already have a key, you can request one via email. motiondsp's current pricing is $29.95 for vreveal premium 3.2, $39.95 for vreveal 3.2 premium with avid dnxhd ott and dnxhd 4k output, $59.2 premium with avid dnxhd ott, dnxhd 4k output, and dnxhd dd, and $69.2 premium with avid dnxhd ott, dnxhd 4k output, dnxhd dd, and dnxhd dd 4k. 5ec8ef588b
