NCR released a patch in late August to fix a power-supply issue with the PowerEdge R5000 (NCR) server and workstations. NCR said the fix was needed because of known issues with the R5000 power supply. As a result, the power supply may shut down at any time and requires a power cycle to power back up. NCR said customers are receiving the fix in several different iterations, and also can download the fix directly from the NCR customer portal. NCR released a patch in mid-August to fix a power-supply issue with the PowerEdge R10000 (NCR) server and workstations. NCR said the fix was needed because of known issues with the R10000 power supply. As a result, the power supply may shut down at any time and requires a power cycle to power back up. NCR said customers are receiving the fix in several different iterations, and also can download the fix directly from the NCR customer portal. Open MPI v1.5 (and later), introduced an implementation issue affecting the out-of-order completion function. The bug was fixed in v1.6. However, if you are running Open MPI 1.5 or earlier, you will have this patch in your running code. The patch has been backported to the 2.0 and 2.1 series in later releases.
