Whether you're tired of driving off road and need something that'll help you stay on the ground, or you're a seasoned off road driver who is looking for a new challenge, Nissan's response to your needs was to develop the Ridgeline. With more power, the newest Ridgeline offers superior off-road traction and steering, improved ride and handling, and a more comfortable and accessible cabin. The new Ridgeline also comes with a range of available features. For example, the cargo floor is raised, creating more cargo space, and then lowered back down to its original position to close off cargo areas. The cargo floor also has air-dampening rubber seals for a smoother ride, and the load floor and liftgate are built from durable steel. The fifth-generation Xterra was the first model that Nissan was able to offer a wide range of powerful, all-wheel-drive, four-wheel-drive configurations. The front-engine, front-drive Xterra started off life as the XE 25T in Japan, with a baseline power of 103 horsepower, an aggressively priced starting price of about $9,000 in the US, and the promise of a 7,200-pound tow capacity. After introducing the 2WD version in the United States in 1995, Nissan introduced a 3WD and 4WD "4x4" version in 1996, followed by a 5WD for Japan. The 2WD was continued for the US until 1998, before the 4WD was discontinued in favor of the 5WD version. The map data with the highest resolution is not always the most accurate. The resolution of the map depends on the map area and the vehicles speed. For further information about the transmission status, contact your local NISSAN Dealer.
