as you may know, android devices run most of their code in the form of android system files (asfs) and many bloatware apps also include asf files. because a bootloader locks down your device so that you can only boot the stock firmware, we need to unlock it first. we cant unlock the device unless youve got access to the bootloader, the unlock key, and the stock firmware for your specific device. while it is possible to root your lenovo vibe k5 a6020I36 without the bootloader, it is not possible to run a custom recovery such as twrp on the device. if you have an unlock key, we will follow the stock firmware unlocking process. before we can go ahead with any process, its important to confirm that your device is not rooted already because your device will not boot if it is already rooted. the easiest way to do this is to open the google play store and install the utility app its inside what's new for the k8 note is a new software experience that leverages face detection, to help users find things with ease. the users of the k8 note will be able to find apps for specific purposes by drawing a simple, specific shape, find the appropriate music files by a pattern on the screen, or even push an app to a less used part of the screen by rotating the phone. lenovo india has already launched two smartphones in the indian market under its moto and yoga brands. the lenovo k8 note (highlight: the k8 note is the first smartphone in india to ship with dolby atmos, a technology that enables true 3d audio - the pictures and videos that you capture are reproduced with more vivid colors and sounds; even the best game, movie and music were never better) and the lenovo yoga 700 (highlight: the lenovo yoga 700 sports 5.2 inches full hd ips display, a 1.5ghz quad-core processor, dolby atmos and a dual camera) to its consumers. you may find something useful here :-)
