the serial number on my singer sewing machine is k7326351. the k ranges i have seen only go to 1260800, and indicate a 1904 date which i am not sure about. it is a 99k, and the plate on the front says eh958178and while the bottom specifically indicates that k7326351 is the serial number, despite the clear numbers on the bottom so i went to singer and they informed me that my machine has a serial number of k7326351 and the model is the 1853 model. i found this out by going to the singer website and looking up the serial number and checking the machine model. i was a little surprised because my machine was purchased in 1996. i would like to know the model is the 1853 model and is it the red eye model as the plates have been removed. thank you! i have a singer treadle sewing machine. from the design on it, it looks like a singer red eye, but the plate has been severely scratched out, why would anyone scratch out the serial number for my machine im not looking to sell it because it is beautiful and in excellent working condition, but it would be nice to know if it is truly a red eye model. i have a singer treadle sewing machine. from the design on it, it looks like a singer red eye, but the plate has been severely scratched out, why would anyone scratch out the serial number for my machine im not looking to sell it because it is beautiful and in excellent working condition, but it would be nice to know if it is truly a red eye model. thanks to any advice.
