A writer's journey: a mythical structure for writers. C. Christopher Vogler. "I have nothing to say about Greece. I'm just a small person - that's all I can say. I can only describe what I saw and felt, and believe me, not too much. I was in Athens and saw the Acropolis "; everything else is just ruins. I visited Delphi and saw a golden tripod, but that does not matter. I have been in the mountains, and these mountains are as far from us as the sky. My love for them is like the love of an old man, who sits in the sun and looks at the birds circling in the air.
