You will get a dual boot option, choose other, hit next and select "entreprise" and then "create partition for BOOT". Most users will probably want to get rid of Windows altogether, since most Chromebooks come with Linux already installed. The most common dual-boot methods require two separate hard drives, so you need a Chromebook with at least two hard drives. Your Chromebooks processor may also limit the number of available partitions you can create, so it's important to make sure you have at least two available. If you already have a 128GB or larger SD card available, you can create a bootable partition from the one available on it. But we found that in many situations it was more convenient to create the bootable SD card via the "create partition for BOOT" option mentioned above.
