Scan for and remove more than 100 different types of spyware, Trojans, and other potentially dangerous infections from your computer. It's the most powerful and highly recommended spyware remover in the world. Adware Description: Adware - spyware that's completely invisible - is one of the greatest security threats to your computer, an issue that's only become more prevalent since the

debut of the World Wide Web. Adware is everywhere. You'll find it on your computer, in your browser, even on your mobile device. Before you know it, every page you view on the web has an ad on it. It's the "rent-a-spy" of the Web. Imagine your computer as an apartment. You don't want people coming in unannounced, peeking in your windows, and taking a peek at the private stuff you're working on. Well, that's pretty much what adware does to your computer. It allows access to your private information and shows ads and pop-ups to trick you into buying products. If you're not careful, adware can steal your identity, put your security at risk, track your online activity, and even slow down your computer. Worse, if you download a free app that contains malware, you may have unwittingly installed some of that software on your computer. The fact is that adware is a silent and insidious problem. And it can get even more damaging than that. An annoying pop-up? That can be a one-time thing that you'll have to deal with. But a security breach that affects your computer, that's a real danger. And this isn't a problem you can live with. The Adware We're Talking About Adware is very easy to get. You see an email from a friend that shows a link, or someone sends you a video, or there's an offer to download something. You click on the link and suddenly you have an unwanted ad on your computer. Why do you think you saw that pop-up? It's because the adware that's on your computer secretly connected to the person who sent that email, or it was watching you as you watched the video, or it's embedded in that offer to download something. Many adware programs are clever enough to disguise themselves in the files they put on your computer. In other cases, adware is added to your browser through cookies. If you have an email client, you're most likely dealing with an adware program that you never heard of. In fact, more than half of the people who download software have adware installed on their computers! That's simply unacceptable. Some Adware Is Really Harmful Adware can be the root cause of a lot of security problems, including spyware,
