Keymacro is a software that allows you to copy an arbitrary number of keys to clipboard and to paste them in any program, including email-clients and browsers. The software works in Windows XP, Vista, Windows 7, Windows 8 and Windows 10 and requires a minimum of 256 MB of RAM (2 GB for Windows 7), a processor at least 2 GHz and it is possible to select the key and paste them in any program you want. The key to paste and the optional fields, can be encrypted. Keymacro, also known as ClipMunki, can also "collect" keys, i.e., it can save in its database, different items, including files and emails, and can make easier to find these. The software can be used offline as a software to "recover" a key, i.e., to recover the key which you have saved in your Clipboard after losing it and for which you have lost the path. Features: ☐ works offline ☐ works from Windows XP and later ☐ works from Windows Vista and later ☐ works from Windows 7 and later ☐ works from Windows 8 and later ☐ works from Windows 10 and later ☐ can recover lost key ☐ can recover lost path ☐ can store up to 25 GB of key ☐ can perform dictionary attacks (against known hash and other patterns) ☐ can perform brute force attacks (against known hash and other patterns) ☐ can search for files of a given file format ☐ allows to keep a list of the key that you have saved in your clipboard ☐ optionally can manage statistics to report (how many times you use your keys, how many times you lost your key, etc.) ☐ can create a virtual memory, i.e., the software does not store all the keys in your hard disk but creates a virtual memory from which you can have access to all the keys that you have saved in the software without access to your hard disk (in this way, we can speak of the software that "stores" keys) ☐ supports different languages, including English, Italian, Spanish, French, German, Russian,
