We made other UI tweaks. Photo tabs have been added to the File Browser and to the Layer dialog. And on the right, you'll now find the Framerate drop-down menu. All of these improvements make for a more agile experience. We also moved the Project Monitor to the right side of the window. The rest of the features in this release are mostly under the hood. We focused on performance, stability and compatibility improvements. Plus some exciting new features like Project Monitor, App Time and the ability to move application window handles to mouse buttons. The new Tonal Curves and Color Curves tools have semi-destructively stacked interactions and a beautifully clear, high-detail view. And in the 3D views, the Geometry tool supports a variety of modelling features that are unique to Iniside. Using the raw power of CUDA-X and OpenCL, the app can generate full-resolution 8K previews within 100 milliseconds. What's more, those previews give you the ability to instantly preview live edits without leaving the app. The new "Project Monitor" window saves and scales the canvas and any linked layers in the active document. So, even when your project contains multiple documents, you'll still only see a single monitor window. Adobe Photoshop COOLSHOTS is the newest addition to Adobe's portfolio of creative tools available on mobile and it's quite possibly the perfect one for you if you are looking for a tool to help you take great looking portraits. Plus, it's free!
