There are a number of global adjustments: The levels setting (which converts dark and light areas into one of four shades of gray) as well as the saturation, hue, and contrast settings. Since you're going to be making a wide variety of adjustments to a photo, you'll need a way to preview how a given adjustment will look on a specific area of your image. This could be a quick teaser of the photo to show friends or a thorough attempt to create a one-of-a-kind work of art.
