Is it enough? Bruce's first attempt at running the world goes horribly awry (Bruce runs into and loses an employee, his wife, and a wild dog), and he becomes depressed. Shortly after marrying for a third time Bruce remains unconvinced that his life will be improved by moving to Buffalo and taking the anchor job.... With a wife, three kids, a dog, and a bad back, Bruce has reached the inevitable age of middle-aged fatherhood, but he is still committed to shaping the course of his life and those around him. 8 Minute Miracle: The Search for Bruce Almighty: I thought the first two episodes were silly, but the last one, on the graduate school of theology, was very funny. Once again, Rob Lowe (Sports Night) plays a washed-up alawyer Bruce God and Jeff Probst is his son. The alawyer is too happy to be married to his father and in the seminary to cause misery. But soon things start to go awry. The alawyer is not an attorney and fails to get his job. However, he gets an offer from a lawyer named Teddy Jacobs (Tim Allen) to work at a casino. Bruce takes Teddy's offer and becomes a casino lawyer. The alawyer realizes that Bruce needs a lawyer who understands him, so he sends him to a seminary. After failing at the seminary, he becomes a preacher and is told by Bruce that he has to lose weight and exercise more. The alawyer finds Teddy and starts dating his girlfriend, but an old flame, Helen (Drew Barrymore), comes in and starts vying for Teddy's attention. While Teddy and Helen go off to San Francisco, Bruce has an epiphany and decides to lose weight and go back to law school. At the graduation party, the alawyer receives a note from a messenger who tells him that Teddy has died of cancer. The alawyer believes that God has denied him. A few months later, Bruce is in court with a client, Dave (Robert Duvall), who is charged with his murder. Because the doctor believes that Dave is in no danger, he wants Bruce to sue the
