There is a Photoshop community forum where users can discuss collaboration, ask questions and even plan Photoshop-related events. The app also supports printing from iPads. When you upload an image, its metadata, including some images of that image in different sizes, is stored in the cloud so that the app can download that information and automatically present the same images whenever you save one. The default in the software is that images are opened in the right side, but the software can be configured to the left of the screen. And to help you access the rest of the settings more easily, the app includes a tool that doubles as an on-screen keyboard. You can use it to navigate through menus and open a toolbox, and when you hold it down while on an on-screen button, it toggles to reveal tool settings. The software's Favorites feature lets you group a palette of frequently-used colors, brushes, textures, and more into a collection called a Favorite. And if you flip your iPad upside down and shake it, the toolbox slides out of the way so you can see your Favorites more easily. You can create a Special Filter with the Express Design panel, but you can also get to it from the Share for Review dialog box. Custom special effects go in this panel: inside the Styles panel on the left, Mini-Options gives you the option to change how a filter is applied. The Filters & Adjustments panel has even more choices. And the bottom half of the screen is devoted to all the other tools in the Paint Bucket—including a palette, grabhand, and eraser. The Brush panel has some new features, including a feature that lets you change the angle of the brush dynamically.
